The Silent Disease

Ever wondered the significance behind the teal ribbons tied on lamp posts along Main Street? With September being Ovarian Cancer Awareness Month, these ribbons are in support of a campaign to promote awareness of ovarian cancer and its symptoms.

Ovarian cancer is the second most common gynecologic cancer in the United States, according to the Center for Disease Control. For information on risk factors, prevention, treatment and survivors' stories, click the button below.

Food That'll Put You in a Playful Mood!

While Chef Jonathan Lundy's newest restaurant will be upscale, it won't be a soup, salad, entrée, dessert kind of place.

Food at restaurant 3Ten, located at 310 West Short St., will be “more playful,” Lundy said.

Playful food? Now that sounds fun!

Lundy and his business partner T. J. Cox own Corto Lima, a couple block east on Short Street. “We purchased this building with the idea of making a restaurant and bar with a different concept from Corto Lima,” he said.

Rather, the menu will be cocktail-focused, bar heavy, but the food will not be bound by a particular concept.

Lundy has been at some of Lexington’s favorite restaurants. Remember Roy & Nadine’s, or Pacific Pearl, not to mention Jonathan at Gratz Park? “All those had a clear food concept. The food geography of this one is going to spread out. It’s not going to be stuck in one concept,” Lundy said.

He’s taking a very hands-on approach in getting this new place ready. Peek in when you pass by, and you’ll see him standing and sawing with the best of them! The work is cosmetic, but when finished, the interior will look completely different.

Lundy and Cox hope to open 3Ten by the end of the year.

Get Your Sweat On Downtown

Want to strengthen your biceps, shore up your core? LiveWELL Training Club will help you get in shape.

The training facility recently moved to 233 East Main, the highly visible corner of East Main and the Esplanade. It had been in the Main & Rose condo complex for several years. When their lease was up, owners Ann-Phillips Mayfield and Jay Ingle jumped at the chance to relocate but stay downtown. “We could stay downtown but move into a larger space,” said Mayfield, business manager and part-time trainer. Many of their members work or live downtown.

Trainers work with small groups of up to four people at a time, customizing workouts to their individual needs. For more information, click the button below or call (859) 266-0030.

Live Long and Prosper

Want to spend an evening with William Shatner? William Shatner? Captain Kirk of the starship USS Enterprise? The very one, except the event is to honor Shatner in a broader way than just Captain Kirk, but as an actor, equestrian and author.

There will be a screening of a documentary of his life, “William Shatner: You can Call Me Bill.” The special evening on October 4 will be fun with opportunities to have a photo taken with Shatner on the red carpet, get a signed poster and much more. Of course, all these extras will cost extra.

If you're really feeling prosperous, you can be included in a small dinner party with Shatner. Those tickets are $2,500. Click the button below for all the details.
